Upland planners urge condo restrictions

Staff Writer After wrestling with the proposed ordinance for more than two hours last week, Upland planning commissioners approved a stringent set of requirements for condominiums and condominium conversions within the

The proposed amendment to the city's municipal code includes controversial restrictions on size, parking accomodations and treatment of tenants displaced by the conversion of apartments into condominiums.

Representatives from the building industry have protested that the city is taking an anti-development approach to conversions by making regulations too deman-

Others, including commissioners Thomas Harris and John Zinda, agreed that the document will reflect city policy on the matter, and officials should settle on a definite stand

Planning Director Bill Young described the delicate balancing act the city will have to perform.

"The trick is to keep an adequate supply of rental housing, so renters are not pushed out of the market," he told commissioners, yet at the same time, keep the housing balance for those who can afford to buy their own

The proposed ordinance would replace the current chapter on planned residential development in the

The third draft, with changes approved by the commissioners, will be presented to the city council for the March 17 meeting.

One of the more controversial points of the ordinance requires a minimum of four parking spaces per unit, two of which must be in an enclosed garage.

Young said that residents of condominiums, as homeowners, need the additional space for storage, hobbies and guest parking as well as for additional vehicles. More families are beginning to move into condominiums as a first home, he added, and the provision for additional room, regardless of unit size, would help avoid any overcrowding in the future. Jim Manning of Acacia Development had a different outlook on the situation.

When I hear 'four parking spaces,'" he told commissioners, "I hear that the city does not want conversions." He said few apartments provide parking facilities that extensive, and by including the minimum as a requirement, the city is preventing a large number of apartment owners from ever converting.

'And conversions do provide affordable housing," added Manning. "They are generally cheaper because they're already built.

Young countered by saying the ordinance would serve as a guideline, and in circumstances where a developer had an acceptable plan that did not strictly adhere to all requirements it would always be possible to obtain a conditional use permit.

A vote to reduce the required number of spaces to three per unit split commissioners down the middle, with Edward Sloman, Al Canestro and John Meyer in favor of three spaces, and Zinda, Harris and James Cummo opposed. Commissioner Faye Bert was absent.

Cummo opposed the motion because he was in favor of reducing the number of spaces to two. The commissioners finally agreed to leave the section as written, with the understanding exceptions may be permitted. Another controversial provision sets minimum floor areas according to the number of bedrooms per unit. For a one-bedroom unit the commissioners agreed on a minimum of 1,000 square feet; for a two-bedroom unit, 1,200 square feet; for the three-bedroom unit, 1,400 square feet, and for four or more bedrooms, 1,600 square

Again, there was dissent among commissioners concerning the large minimum areas, but the condition was passed with the stipulation Young would add and indicating the intent of the city to provide adequate living space and giving the flexibility of allowing exceptions. Still another controversial provision concerns apartment renters involved in conversions.

Commissioners agreed to shorten the notification period beginning when the owner indicates his intent to convert, and ending when the renter must relocate, from 180 days to 120 days, the minimum required by state law. A requirement for all owners converting to condominiums to provide moving expenses for tenants was plans, if the subdivider had made such plans. The proposed ordinance also calls for a maximum of 15 units per acre and generous separation between buildings.

changed to ask for submittal for relocation assistance

Work to revise the ordinance began four months ago after the city council asked the commission to set up guidelines for the conversion of apartments into condominiums.

A 120-day moratorium on applications for conversions expired Feb. 15. That moratorium has not been extended.

Council reacts to strong protest

Upland halts plans to alter road

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

In response to irate residents, the Upland City Council Monday amended plans for changes to 24th Street that would have been made in conjunction with a proposed planned residential development (PRD).

The original conditional use permit called for developers of the PRD to build a slight jag in 24th Street just west of Mountain Avenue. The change was to accommodate possible future plans to close off the street in a cul-de-sac in accordance with the city's master

More than 75 residents of the area crowded the council chambers to protest the proposed action. They said the potential closing of 24th Street would cut off a major access route to their homes located in the county, outside city limits.

Mayor George Gibson twice threatened to continue the matter to the next council meeting when members of the audience interrupted discussion to voice their objections.

Opponents to the street change submitted a petition signed by 116 local residents, primarily from the county area. The group said they found the closure of 24th Street unacceptable, "either in two steps or one.

Perry Ogden, spokesman for the group, said they had no major objection to the PRD itself, but felt that the street change infringed on the "long-established vested interests, moral if not legal," for use of the road.

The 35-unit PRD was proposed by Orchard Terrace Inc., of Corona Del Mar. Bill Uhl, architect for the project, told the council it would be geared toward the empty-nester market - older couples who no longer have children living at home. The units will range from 2,000 to 2.500 square feet, with a fewer number of bedrooms than usual, high security, and joint use of a swimming pool, jacuzzi and canbana Both Uhl and project engineer Roger Cunliffe-Owen of Landmark Consultants, Upland, assured the council and audience that the developer was willing to adjust plans to fit whatever decision was made for the future of 24th Street.

Ogden agreed that developers had been cooperative, and his major concern rested with city officials' 'disregard of long-time use by area residents" of the street, not with halting the PRD.

City Engineer Fred Blanchard reminded the group that closure of 24th Street remained an issue to be decided in the future. He said the proposed swerve in the road would accommodate thru traffic, yet facilitate maintenance of the rightof-way by assigning the land to the Part of the current right-of-way would have been walled in as back yard area for two of the units.

While agreeing to leave 24th Street in its present state, the council provided for future installation of the cul-de-sac by giving the needed area to the developer for landscaping.

If the decision to vacate the street is made, that land may be reclaimed for the cul-de-sac.

If and when the city completes a proposed north-south route in addition to Mountain Avenue, the issue of possible closure of 24th Street will then be addressed. Although this is included in the city's master plan, Blanchard said it must still be set before residents in a public hearing, and the change enacted only if considered

Ogden said he was very pleased with the council's decision, adding that he found council members cooperative in dealing with the Blanchard said the change of plan would cost the city a little more if the street is eventually closed, but that he found the solution satisfactory.

Attorney seeks council seat again

Annigian starts Upland campaign

Upland attorney Gregory T. Annigian has announced his intention to run for the office of Upland city council member in the April 8 municipal elections.

He said his campaign will center around the issues of keeping the small-town atmosphere of the city as intact as possible, and insuring the voter a direct say in city financial matters. He also is supportive of youth recreational programs sponsored by the city.

"I want to see our city stay small," said Annigian. "We need to preserve it against the problems that arise with overdevelopment."

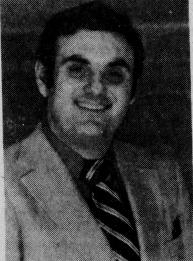

He added that while growth is inevitable, it should be engineered through design rather than accident. 'Growth does not mean low cost housing tracts, undesirable com-

The program will follow from 10:30 to 11:30 featuring the Rev. Ellsworth Benedict, host church pastor, as speaker. Special music will be offered by the International Choir from Azusa Pacific College.

Two other local celebrations also will mark World Day of Prayer on Friday. The first will be held from 10 to 11 a.m. at the Cucamonga United Methodist Church, 7690 Archibald Ave., Cucamonga.

A national day of prayer has been celebrated by women in this country since 1887. This year, people in more than 150 countries and islands around the world will gather in prayerful consideration of "Responsible Freedom." Church Women United is the official sponsor of World Day of Prayer in the United States.

Each year, women from a different country are asked to write the World Day of Prayer service based on themes selected by the international committee for the day.

This year's service has been writen by the Christian women of Thailand, thanking their "sisters in Africa for the World Day of Prayer program for 1979 which reminded us of our need for 'spiritual growth."

The Thai women encourage their sisters and brothers around the world "to continue to grow in the spirit; that is, to love Jesus Christ more and to live closer to him. Because he loves us and is united to us, we are able to convenant with others. To covenant with others means to love, to be concerned, to be responsible.

As people around the world form a chain of prayer on Friday, the words of Kenneth Kaunda, president of Zambia, to the International Committee for World Day of Prayer in April 1978 point up the importance of this day: "Clearly, if there is any one act that binds us together ... it is prayer — our open acknowledgement of the overwhelming greatness of God to whom we seek to be united and our appeal to God for peace among ourselves, not in the future, but

World Day of Prayer in this country also will launch a "Spirit Walk" across the land for Church Women United in anticipation of the Ecumenical Assembly to be held June 26-29 at USC. The "Spirit Walk" will be a movement of prayer from state to state and country to country, with each being responsible for a day of prayer. The walk begins Friday with World Day of Prayer in Atlantic City, N.J., and will be completed on May Fellowship Day, new guidelines for land uses in future

The county board or board schedule workshop supervisors has approved, in concept, most of a new development code that would provide new guidelines for future land use in the unincorporated areas of the county.

Mainstreaming is working there because of a unique "reciprocal exchange" practiced by the teachers of the regular and exceptional children. This is also known as "cross mainstreaming," and alleviates the com-plications of handicapped children in the regular

To make cross mainstreaming work, the Margarita AH teachers bring regular students into their classrooms for certain subjects. They also teach special subjects to the regular classrooms, and they join the regular teachers to instruct the enlarged, mainstreamed classes.

"Mainstreaming is a well - meshed program at Margarita School," said Principal Norma LeDoux. "The staff cooperates for everyone's mutual benefit and the AH children are successfully integrated in all phases of our school program."

According to West End Consortium Program Specialist Carolyne Tarris, who is responsible for the 635 moderately to severely AH students in the West End, "The reciprocal mainstreaming actually encourages the socialization and rapport between the AH and regular

Ann Kamansky teaches the preschool AH children at Margarita. "I have children at the beginning of the year who know no words," Kamansky said. "The first thing we have to teach them is to understand environmental sounds, like car horns, and the few words they must use to express their needs."

In grades 1-6 the teachers stress more understanding of vocabulary, expression, and the refining of speech patterns. It is interesting to note that the AH children are as talkative and noisey as any classroom of elementary Parents of handicapped children are also encouraged to become involved. Kamansky offers a weekly evening class for parents of her preschoolers. The parents learn everything from how to read and play with their child to how to care for their hearing aids

Once the AH students get the basics from Kamansky, teachers Barbara Morris and Sue Jackson work to bring their knowledge up to the appropriate grade level while improving their communication skills. When grade - level achievement is reached each student is mainstreamed into regular classrooms for that sub-

"We monitor their progress in the regular classrooms very closely," explained Morris. "But they really enjoy interacting with the other students. This peer interaction and learning is very important."

According to Jackson, the students are involved in as many extracurricular activities as the regular students.

Supervisors slow development of plans for two-county hospital

Staff Writer

The county board of supervisors Monday slowed the development of a regional hospital plan with Riverside County.

Talks between representatives of the two counties began in December

Robert Russell, administrator of the county health care services agency, said the discussions recognize a "common situation" that both the San Bernardino County Medical Center and Riverside County General Hospital are aging and in need of structural improvements and modernization.

He asked the board Monday to authorize officials from both counties to prepare a joint powers agreement for construction and operation of a two-county hospital, relocating services to a single site.

The agreement draft would be submitted to the board for cosideration no later than June 1, he

The board stopped short of approving the drafting of the agreement and requested a workshop session to further discuss the arrangement for a two-county hospital.

For Chairman James Mayfield, the major sticking point was funding. The counties need some agreement on funding before developing a joint powers agreement, Mayfield said.

"I'm reluctant to be drug around by the nose by some bond consultant like we have been in the past," he said.

Supervisor Dennis Hansberger also asked for more discussion and, referring to the status report, said, "I'm not quite satisfied with what's

He noted the the boards of supervisors for the two counties may not want the same board of directors for the proposed joint powers authority to be in charge of both the construction and the operation of the hospital.

Russell said that selection of a bond consultant would be brought before the board later. He said the recommendation is for each county board to place two of its members on the hospital board of directors. which would have up to nine members.

"I don't want our staffs to fell feel that they can go off with a blank check looking for a consultant," Mayfield said.

Referring to the need for bond counsel, Russell said the "very specialized" bond issue could total $60 million.

Docent auxiliary elects officers

Officers to serve a two year term from 1980 to 1982 have been elected by Las Guias, the Casa de Rancho Cucamonga Historical Society's docent auxiliary.

Elected were: Dorothy A. Schmidt of Alta Loma, chairman; Marjorie F. Stamm of Alta Loma, vice chairman; Sharon E. Garrett of Ontario, secretary; and Linda Kesig of Alta Loma, treasurer.

Las Guias is a volunteer group organized to assist the historical society in restoring, maintaining and furnishing the Rains' house at Vineyard Avenue in keeping with its 1860 origins.

Among auxiliary activities are docents (guides) welcoming guests on Saturday and Sunday afternoons when the house is open to the public and on Wednesdays for pre-arranged school tours.

Membership to the auxiliary is by invitation only and is limited to 30 women.

Taxpayers hit by flood can ask extensions

Taxpayers in San Bernardino County who have been prevented by the recent storms and floods from paying sales, use and other business taxes may be granted up to 30 days extension without penalty, the State Board of Equilization has announced.

The law authorizes an extension to any taxpayer who requests it prior to or within the extension period. Any taxpayer in counties which have been declared disaster areas may request the extension by writing to the district office of the Board of Equalization.

A Bighorn ram, one of nearly 700 of the rare mountain sheep that roam the San Gabriel Mountains, stares out from behind brush in the Mt. Baldy area.

Bighorn sheep still inhabit wilderness

Long before white men laid eyes on the San Gabriel Mountains, bighorn sheep roamed the rugged and inaccessible terrain.

Bighorn sheep still graze in the mountains, an estimated animals dotting the slopes in herds considered among the healthiest and most stable in California.

But the ambitions of men are slowly pushing the edges of civilization upward, reaching the inaccessible, taming the wilds. Environmentalists fear the sheep herds will find survival more and more difficult - perhaps impossible.

During the past 10 years, numerous groups have sought to protect the bighorn sheep by having a portion of the mountains officially designated as a wilderness area.

Currently five bills are before Congress which would make portions of land. largely to the west of Mt. Baldy, the Sheep Mountain Wilderness. Size of the wilderness area outlined in the various bills range from 32,000 acres up to 50,000

The sheep are a "special interest" species, according to Don Stikkers, Forest Service district ranger for the Mt. Baldy area. They are not endangered or threatened, but could slip into those categories if human activity in their habitat is not monitored.

As far as the Forest Service can determine, said Stikkers, the sheep have never been in danger of extinction in the San Gabriels, but past activity by man has had a drastic impact on their numbers.

The greatest impact came from gold mining in San Gabriel Canyon. Stikkers explained that the miners often hunted the sheep as a source of fresh meat, but there has been little danger from hunters since the last mine closed in the 1940s.

Bob McDonald, a Citrus College instructor and member of the Sierra Club, said, "In a way, it's a miracle we have these sheep

McDonald said that it is a unique situation in the United States to have such a large population of rare wildlife within 35 miles of one of the country's major metropolitan Stikkers said currently there is insufficient data to determine what impact man has had on the sheep. Dr. Glenn Stewart, a wildlife biologist at Cal Poly, has conducted a census of the sheep with the Forest Service for the past four Stewart explained that when the studies of the sheep were originally begun by one of his graduate students it was thought there were only 300 to 400 in the San Gabriel range. The census, however, has indicated the number may be twice

Although the idea of a wilderness has been discussed for 10 years, Stikkers explained that Congress first expressed interest when money was appropriated in 1976 for a study of the proposed wilderness area.

A wilderness area, said Stikkers, is an area that is "largely and historically" undisturbed by man. to activities which do not interfere with the environment, such as hiking and backpacking, and commercial activity would be limited to grazing domestic animals or mining on claims filed before 1983

It is the latter activity that has most environmental groups worried, since a tungsten mining operation has been working in Cattle Canvon, within the proposed wilderness area, since 1973.

The groups concede that the current level of mining activity has had no apparent adverse impact on the sheep, but a proposal to open an abandoned fire road for access to the mine worries many.

An environmental assessment report and "associated decision" notice on the road has been issued by the Forest Service. Charlie McDonald, assistant lands officer for the Forest Service in Pasadena, said the decision will allow the road to be opened nine months of the year, from July 1 to April 1, and stipulates mitigating conditions that mine operators must adhere to.

The additional conditions were "too lengthy" to go into, explained McDonald, but he said when arrangements for meeting them are worked out between the district ranger and miners, a permit for reopening the road could be issued

Before the Forest Service decision was announced, tungsten mine owner Ron Curtis of Upland explained that the yearly washouts of the road he currently uses, running along the bottom of a canyon, is costing him production losses he can't afford.

When a recent rainstorm dumped 12 inches on his property, Curtis said, it took two weeks to reopen the road. The rebuilt road now has 34 stream crossings in a five-mile

"We spend more time in the water than we do on the road," said Curtis. In addition, Curtis' wife, Claire, explained the mileage distance between the lower road and the abandoned fire road is 120 miles round trip from their home in Upland. But the fire road cuts through a lambing area, where the sheep give birth to their young, and enviromentalists worry about the effects ore trucks would have on the "If Curtis continues to use that lower road for access, the sheep will continue to use the area as they do at the present time," explained Stewart. "The problem is if you open access on that higher road you will have a certain amount of daily traffic on it which would probably prevent sheep from using that

McDonald said the Sierra Club is opposed to reopening the fire road. Although he understands that Curtis is looking for the most economical way to get his ore out of the mountains, McDonald said, 'Miners are used to adversity in getting their ore out.

And, he added, "We don't like to take any chance or risk with the William Wirtz, a wildlife biologist at Pomona College, said the problem with the road proposals is that there has been insufficient data gathered by the Forest Service to determine what affect reopening the road will have on the sheep.

Wirtz explained that some sheep ranges in the Sierras have been closed to hikers because of their effect on the animals, but the effects on herds vary from area to area. And Stikkers said, "A lot of it depends on how the sheep perceive an activity as being a threat to If activity is below the sheep and away from their natural escape route up the side of a mountain, said Stikkers, they usually tolerate activity quite close to their range. Mrs. Curtis said the sheep in Cattle Canyon often come down to watch the miners work and have to be chased off when the miners are using dynamite.

One miner was even fired for throwing rocks at the sheep, said Curtis. "That's how close they get.

Wirtz said he is not an an on the road issue and added that Curtis has been very amenable to making provisions for the sheep.

Curtis said he has offered to put a 24-hour guard on the road to keep vehicles, other than his, from using it, shut down the road during the lambing season and run his trucks at night, if it will get the road open.

The Sierra Club, said McDonald, considers the concessions Curtis has proposed "iffy" and questions how long they might stay in force once the road is open.

Any conditions imposed on Curtis to reopen the road would have to be carefully examined by the Sierra Club before a decision whether to oppose the road opening in court could be made, said McDonald.

And Stikkers said reopening of the road would require monitoring the sheep and any adverse effect the road might have on them.

The Curtis mine has had no apparent affect on the sheep, conceded McDonald, and he forsees no problem if the mine remains a "family operation."

But McDonald said proposals for developing a ski resort on the backside of Mt. Baldy could put additional pressure on the sheep. Stikkers said such proposals have not yet advanced beyond the talking McDonald, however, said the development of skiing in the Baldy Notch during the 1950s has driven sheep from that area and opening up the other side of Mt. Baldy would have a similar effect. Stewart added that although ski operators would only operate the lifts in the winter, when the sheep are on lower slopes, opening up the area would bring in people year around, driving the sheep out of the

Of all the legislative proposals on sheep mountain wilderness areas, said McDonald, only two address the issue of development.

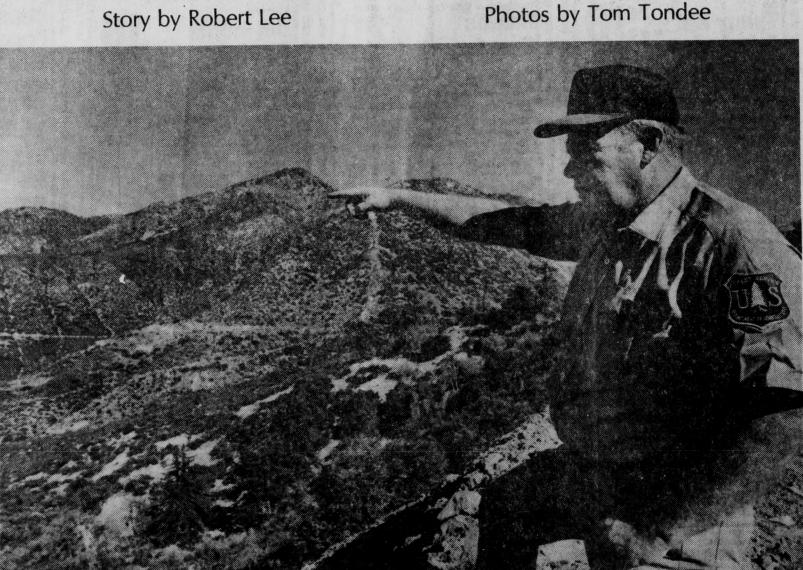

The Sierra Club will support a bill by Congressman Jim Lloyd, said McDonald, which would provide for 45,000 acres, including the proposed ski development. A similar bill, sponsored by Senator Alan Cranston, which excludes the area of proposed ski development, "comes close, but leaves out something essential,' said McDonald.

A spokesman for Lloyd's office said the first of the sheep mountain wilderness legislation will probably reach the floor of Congress in a few months.

As Wirtz explained, "It's a difficult problem, which is wh people have been arguing about it

Dick DeLacy, a ranger with the U.S. Forest Service, points out some of the rugged terrain southwest of Mt. Baldy that is proposed to be included in the proposed Sheep Mountain Wilderness. Proposals for the wilderness have been discussed for nearly 10 years, and currently five bills are in Congress to establish the wilderness, which could be a size from $2,000 across to $2,000 range in size from 32,000 acres to 50,000 acres.

OCHA gives $6,000 to hospital

Four checks totaling $6,000 have been presented to the Ontario Community Hospital by the Ontario Community Hospital Auxiliary

Lois Lansdale, auxiliary president, gave the checks to John Packard, new hospital administrator, at a recent hospital function.

The checks were: $2,000 for the cardiopulmonary resucitation program, $1,000 for the Patient Education Fund, $2,000 for lobby display and improvement and $1,-000 from the Ella Thompson Memorial Fund as part of a special scholarship fund to further the nursing profession. This money will be administrated by the hospital in the name of the auxiliary.

The auxiliary will meet Wednesday morning in the hospital Conference Room and then adjourn to the Sycamore Inn, Cucamonga, for a no-host luncheon. This will be part of the group's "Saladless Salad Bar" when members contribute the cost of making a salad instead of preparing the dishes as a fund raiser.

Reservations for Wednesday's event are being taken by Cora Johnson at 984-8802. A special program will be given by the radiology department of the hospital. Three delegates also will be elected to attend the California Hospital Association Convention for Hospital Volunteers on Feb. 24 and 25 at the Regency Hotel in San

A nominating committee will be elected to present the slate of officers for next year

Nell Cate of the local auxiliary has been installed as president-elect of the San Bernardino County Council of Hospital Auxiliaries, formerly known as the Inland Desert Area Council. She was installed last month at Loma Linda University Medical Center, Loma Linda.

YCC applications available locally

Forest Supervisor Bob Tyrrel announced today that the San Bernardino National Forest will participate again this year in the Youth Conservation Corps (YCC), an environmental education and work experience program.

This program provides summer employment for young men and women between the ages of 15 and 18. Eight weeks of conservation work are combined with outdoor education to help enrollees develop an understanding and appreciation for the natural environment.

Project work will consist of trail maintenance and construction, erosion control, campground maintenance and litter cleanup. The YCC is a well balanced program where enrollees earn, work, learn and also receive high school credit.

Young people interested in the program can obtain applications through their high school counseling offices. Applications and information on the YCC are also available at U.S. Forest Service offices located in San Bernardino, Big Bear, Lytle Creek, Rimforest, Mill Creek and Idyllwild.

The YCC Program was established by Congress to offer youth gainful employment and environmental education in the National Forests, National Parks and the other public lands of the United States. Applications must be received by the YCC Selection Office by March 15. Selections for YCC positions are made randomly and applicants will be notified of selection or non-selection.

Church attendance rising in West End

Pastors say young families attracted to active evangelical congregations

By BLAINE METCALF Staff Writer

West End churches have shown a marked increase in the number of people attending worship services in recent years, an informal survey of ministers indicates. Increases among larger congregations include a noticable number of young people, many of whom are married and have young children.

The reason, according to Bob Erikson, one of several pastors at Life Bible Fellowship in Upland, is that young people are looking for a "strong voice on what is right and what is wrong according to the word of God."

Erikson says that the growth, which is taking place nationally as well as locally, is basically due to the apparent unfulfilled need in young people to find direction and leadership in both the moral and spiritual areas of their lives.

Erikson believes that his church is growing through its evangelical approach in offering a type of biblical foundation that the liberal churches of the past two decades didn't offer.

The evangelical movement in Christian churches seems to be growing strong roots in the West End, and those churches that are not adapting to this brand of "born-again Christianity" seem to be struggling to maintain their present congregation, local ministers say.

This does not mean that attendance is falling off in the so-called "traditional" churches in the West End. But those churches do not seem to be able to hold or to attract many of the younger people looking for a church experience in their lives, according to several ministers. However, traditional churches are noticing differences

However, traditional churches are noticing differences in the age make-up of their congregations, and this is being reflected in the state of their congregation's finances.

A case in point:
Although attendance at the First Baptist Church of Ontario has not increased during the last few years, it has remained stable. But without the influx of new members First Baptist is feeling the results of inflation and what it is doing to the contributions in weekly collection plates.

According to Dr. Ralph Lightbody, pastor of First Baptist, the present financial status has meant that the church has had to re-shape its programs and projects or else drop them completely.

First Baptist now has an on-going evangelical program and a membership retention committee, both of which are meeting monthly to plan continued strategies to maintain and increase the size of the congregation.

But not all of the traditional churches in the West End are fighting to maintain their congregations. Some of them, in fact, do not even have to be very active to realize increases in the numbers of their fold.

St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Upland, the newest parish in the area, has had an increase of more than 450 families during the past four of its six years.

The Rev. Peter Brennan notes that while the parish is finding that most of the newcomers tend to be under 30 years of age, many over that age can be found.

As with many area churches that are enjoying membership growth, St. Anthony's is also finding that interest in Bible study classes has grown measureably during the last half of the past decade.

The need to learn and understand the Bible seems to be of major importance among the younger segment of the new parishoners, says Brennan.

Gary Nolan, pastor of the 2 ½-year-old Grace Brethren Church of Alta Loma, has built his entire church program around biblical study and reflection.

Nolan says that 100 or so people attend Grace Brethren for reasons of faith coupled with a spirited desire to learn from the word of God and understand how it relates to their personal, everyday lives.

The growing numbers and dedication of Grace Brethren's congregation is also reflected in its program of expansion and physical growth.

Though presently meeting in temporary facilities at Alta Loma High School, the congregation will move to its own multi-purpose worship hall in May. Grace Brethren also plans to continually expand its building program to make use of the five acres on which the new facility is being built.

With enthusiasm running high, Nolan hopes that the Church's expansion program eventually will find "pockets" of additional young, married faithful by covering the entire area with a series of home Bible study courses.

Similar enthusiasm is found in the voice of Rev. David Anderson, the pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, when he speaks of the success of Bible study classes as an on-going activity of the church.

The congregation at Westminster Presbyterian, located in northeast Ontario, is a mixture of age groups, and all appear to be ever-interested in the importance that the written word of God has for them individually. Though attendance at the weekly study classes is low Growth of another sort has taken place during the past few years at the First Baptist Church of Montclair, according to Rev. Kenneth R.T. Gordon.

Gordon says that the First Baptist Church is a composite church made up of its own members and former parishioners from the old Temple Baptist Church of Ontario.

Several years ago Temple Baptist realized that it was not making the same transformation as the neighborhood it was located in, says Gordon.

According to Gordon, many of those attending Temple Baptist turned to the formation of new churches in their home towns of Chino, Upland, and Alta Loma.

One segment from Temple Baptist began attending

One segment from Temple Baptist began attending worship services at First Baptist of Montclair two years ago, says Gordon.

Since that time, each of the various Baptist churches have flourished. First Baptist of Montclair has a congregation of over 300 people, according to Gordon. Gordon says that the church's facilities are taxed. They now hold both morning and evening worship services on Sundays and additional Bible study classes fill every useable space in the church.

When asked about the make-up of the fold, Gordon said, various age groups are well represented.

Many of the newer parishoners of the Community Four Square Church of Upland are young married couples with children, says Rev. Stephen Harris, pastor of that church.

Harris says that the two-year-old church has grown during the past 3 months.

A large part of Community Four Square's members are parents, says Harris, so the church provides day care and pre-school programs for their children. Harris says he expects to see continued growth beyond the present 120 people now attending.

Overall, even though some West End churches are struggling to maintain members, many congregations seem to be increasing each year and their sound financial status is promising that they will be able to associate director of development until the new assignment was made by Pitzer President Frank, L. Ellsworth.

This is the first time a woman has held a chief development office in the Claremont Colleges, Jackman said with a smile of satisfaction.

"I'm not militant, but I am concerned with the rights of women as well as minorities," she said. Women need to watch out for themselves. Not every woman must work, some can best express themselves as homemakers. It depends on the woman - it's a personal thing.'

Jackman, a slim, chic blonde, said she is in favor of equal salary for women in male-oriented jobs and is in favor of the ERA (Equal Rights Amendment) and the drafting of women for selective service and in serving the country in case the need

Lee Herold came to Claremont from Pittsburg, Pa., when she was a high school senior.

"I was looking forward to the sunshine and palm trees," she said, the change in my senior year. I figured it was up to me to go 75 percent of the way to make friends here, so I joined youth groups in churches and at school. The friends I made then I still have."

Mrs. Jackman said her father, the late Edgar Herold, told her mother, Leilah, that she was not to have a career (school teacher), but was to stay home and raise Lee and her sister, Karen (now Gallagher of Sacramento).

"Mother did just that, but when Karen graduated from high school, she said, 'I'm going back to work. She found a teaching position at St. Paul's Episcopal Day School in Pomona and is still there," Jackman said.

"I realize now the strength of character she had."

After high school, Jackman attended Chaffey College, Sawyer Business School and the University of California, Riverside. "I'm always going to Riverside for classes even now," she said. Her first job was in technical ting company. "What I couldn't get over was working with women who hated their jobs — and many of them are still there," she said.

Next came a job as switchboard operator for the Claremont Unified School District, and with her need for more responsibility, she eventually became secretary to the assistant superintendent. In time, Jackman felt she needed to fulfill more goals. "As much as I enjoyed my work with the school district, I realized in 10 years more I'd be at the same desk, doing the same thing." Jackman also was lecturing on career options and changes at Citrus College, so she said, "I sat down and took some of my own advice to determine ... Who am I? What skills do I have? ... I knew I needed to feel successful."

Lee Jackman is the wife of Duane Jackman, principal of Vista del Valle Elementary School, where their daughter, Aimee, 11, attends. There are also two sons, Aaron 18, and Adam, 16.

Indians, soldiers, land barons, drunken miners, priests and assorted women, plus many others, all had a hand in putting the names of California cities, counties and physical features on the map.

You need a big map to find some of the more interesting names. And Neutra is known as one of the first architects to make a conscious application of the findings of biology and the behavioral sciences to the design of human environments. He is recognized for designs with austere, functional lines and for those which provide good human settings in limited space.

According to Jere Stuart French, dean of the Cal Poly Pomona school of environmental design, the Neutra Research House "is a noteworthy piece of modern architectural history and a significant architectural accomplishment. That the home has survived well through the test of time is a tribute to the creative concepts of Richard and Dion Neutra." Dion Neutra, Neutra's son, and Neutra collaborated on the house.

"This house will provide", says French, "a wonderful opportunity for students and faculty for study . . . There are many lessons to be learned from the house from the standpoint of design and materials that were innovative at the time of its construction." In addition to its value as an on-site learning laboratory, says French, "The Neutra house gives us the opportunity to have a Los Angeles base for programs in which the school is involved.

Eventually the home will be be used also as a place for meetings of the architectural faculty and for faculty

Born in Austria and raised in Vienna, Neutra came to the United States in 1923 where he studied, for a while, under Frank Lloyd Wright. Neutra became established as a designer of residences in the 1930s. His commissions were varied. Many of his houses were completed on minimal budgets yet each reflected the lifestyle and needs of the family for whom it was built.

Also during the 1930s, he began to design multiple housing projects and apartments including the federal Channel Heights housing project, the first project on which his son Dion worked with him. In the 1940s the Neutras built the Palm Springs desert house that uses the natural setting to protect the inhabitants from the desert climate.

The Neutras designed and built a variety of structures including schools, office buildings, churches, clinics, libraries, college facilities and museums and their

In addition to the Silverlake house, Los Angeles Neutra andmarks include the Phillip Lovell Health House, 1927; the Mariner's Medical Arts Building designed to promote tranquility and privacy between doctor and patient; the Beverly Hills High School auditorium; the Richard J. Neutra Elementary School emphasizing outdoor classes and partitionless classrooms for the movement of students between classes; the Los Angeles County Hall of Records; the 13-story tower addition to the Garden Grove Church, and the U.S. Department of Justice complex.

A zestful dressing can add flair to lettuce wedges. This Honey Mustard Dressing tops lettuce wedges and slivers or slices of toasted almonds. A light, fresh salad oil plus the spicy Dijon mustard give the dressing zest and taste appeal. Try it on salad tonight and add a finesse to any meal.

To simple lettuce wedge

Zestful dressing adds that flair

Even a simple wedge of crisp lettuce can show your inventiveness. Western iceberg lettuce topped with a zestfully seasoned Honey Mustard Dressing brings finesse to any meal.

Be sure to choose only the freshest of ingredients. Proper handling and storage is important, too. Core, rinse and thoroughly drain lettuce. Chill in crisper or disposable plastic bag in refrigerator. Cut into wedges just before serving.

The lightly toasted California almonds are a surprise ingredient that makes this simple salad so special.

For the dressing, use one of the mild flavors of honey produced in California such as orange, sage or alfalfa. A light fresh salad oil plus the spicy Dijon mustard will give the dressing zest and taste appeal.

Almond Lettuce Wedges With Honey Mustard Dressing

1 cup salad oil 1/4 cup cider vinegar

1 tablespoon mild flavored California honey

2 tablespoons Dijon mustard

Place all ingredients in blender container. Whirl for 1 minute or until thoroughly blended. Makes about 1-1/3 Salad:

1 head iceberg lettuce

½ cup slivered or sliced almonds, lightly toasted Remove core from lettuce, rinse and drain thoroughly Cut into 6 wedges. Chill thoroughly. Place on serving plates. Spoon on Honey Mustard Dressing and sprinkle wedges with almonds. Makes 6 servings.

Honey has been a favorite sweet of man since prehistoric times. It's nature's own convenience food Honey provides quick food energy as the simple sugars are easily digestible.

Read the label on jars or cans of honey to be sure you are purchasing the flavor of your choice. In California the most popular flavors are: orange, sage, buckwheat or alfalfa. Alfalfa is slightly cinnamon in flavor.

Generally the lighter the color, the milder the flavor with most honeys. Orange has a delicate taste of that glorious fruit.

Honey used as a sweetener for bread, rolls, cookies or coffee cake keeps them moist and fresh. Honey will also lend a rich flavor.

Honey is a natural sweetener. It does not mask flavors. For fresh garden flavor for peas, carrots or stewed tomatoes, add 1 teaspoon mild flavored California honey when cooking. You will enjoy the vegetables flavor without detecting the honey.

For a delicious honey glaze, blend equal parts of California port wine or fresh orange juice with California honey. Great over ham! May also be used as a basting sauce for baked pears or apples. Honey raisin wedges are easy to make. Stir up a package of muffin mix following package directions. Spread into well buttered 8-inch pie plate. Drizzle top with honey. Cover with 1/2 cup seedless raisins. Bake as directed. Serve piping hot with plenty of butter and California honey.

Cheese spread good on snacks

Bits and pieces of Cheddar cheese can be used for Rosy Cheese Spread, great for after school or pre-dinner snacking. Place one cup shredded Cheddar cheese, ¼ cup dairy sour cream, 1 jar (2 oz.), chopped pimiento and liquid. 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce and one teaspoon Dijon mustard in blender container; cover. Blend unil mixture is smooth and creamy. Refrigerate one or two hours to blend flavors. Use with assorted crackers or vegetables as dippers. Makes about 11/2 cups.

Hard - boiled eggs? Never! Overcooking eggs can toughen them so don't ever boil them for any extended length of time. Instead, cover them with water, bring to a rapid boil them remove from the heat cover the pan and let stand 15 minutes for large size eggs. Adjust the time 3 minutes up or down for each size larger or smaller. Cool immediately under cold running water and

Thanks to our employees, too.

Thank you for your patience and understanding of electric service interruptions during the recent rain storms which were among the worst in the memory of our company.

Most interruptions were caused by damage to our facilities, falling trees and flooding. Over 340,000 of our customers experienced interruptions of varying duration during the storms.

We called into service all available personnel and moved crews and equipment throughout our 50,000 square mile service territory. In addition, we hired outside electric contractors and tree trimmers.

Our crews worked around the clock—with only short rest breaks—for more than 73,000 man hours of stormrelated work.

The cost of damaged equipment and of replacing downed poles and lines and of the labor to do the work will be more than $5,500,000.

We're very proud of the dedication and long hours of hard work of our employees. We also want to thank you, our valued customers, for your cooperation and understanding during this trying period.

Keeping the highways safe for motorists is not an easy task for the Department of Motor Vehicles. But it tries.

Its biggest problems are, of course, motorists: Those with poor behavioral attitudes. Those with physical or mental problems. Those who drive under the influence of drugs or drink, or both. Those who have no business being behind the wheel of an automobile, but who got there through fradulent application of driver's licenses Those who are driving in violation of probation.

Each year thousands of motorists with these problems receive the special attention of DMV analysts whose job is to either help them correct their driving deficiencies or get them off the road.

Such motorists contribute and injury - accident rates crippling injuries problems.

Half of all fatal accidents involve drinking drivers.

Drivers with mental and physical disabilities are traffic tickets for moving often high-risk motorists.

Because of the rapidly growing population in California, these drivers are gaining in numbers, and the DMV is worried.

So much so that Doris Alexis. DMV state director. has instituted a new program of community safety awareness.

The program is aimed at driver improvement asking segments of the public to cooperate in finding ways of improving driver behavior on the road to reduce traffic accidents, particularly those that disproportionately to death result in deaths and

Home heating goes out windows

Copley News Service BERKELEY - Windows are great for views and for light and for that cheerful touch that can make the difference between a mere house and a home.

They also can play hob with your heating and cooling bills. It has been estimated that 5 percent of the nation's annual energy consumption literally goes out the

And that is why window research suddenly has become a priority item to the scientists at the University of California's Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory. In the face of a growingly critical energy shortage, they want to find out how to stem that wasted flow. The laboratory's window research program is probing the thermodynamic properties of windowpanes, shades, screens and other window dressings, working with products already on the market but also prodding manufacturers and architects to incorporate new energy saving designs into the windows in your future.

Surprisingly, little is known, however, about the complex forces that act on the simple windows in your home or office or factory, yet these forces can drain away and waste up to a quarter of the energy used to heat, cool and light these buildings The trade-offs are complex and often puzzling," says Stephen Selkowitz, who heads the window research group with Sam Berman. "We are trying to simultaneously plug a vast energy drain and harness a useful resource. 'A typical windowpane loses expensive heat at night during the winter but captures warmth from sunlight and provides free interior lighting all around the year. During the air - conditioning months of summer, that same window may trap unwanted heat, but when opened will allow breezes to cool the people and the building inside. "We try to optimize a window's best physical properties and neutralize the worst, while remembering that windows provide an accustomed link with the outside world and serve a decorative, architectural function. Although the window research program is centered at the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, Seklwitz said, much of it has been assigned to subcontractors around the country. The research is studying such areas as this:

- A hunt for a commercially feasible "heat mirror," a coating deposited on glass, or plastic, that admits sunlight but reflects the heat absorbed by indoor surfaces, thus cutting heat losses in half.

 A search for "selective coatings" that would screen some of the sun's invisible heat rays while allowing light to enter the window, in order to balance the needs of summer cooling, winter heating and year - round

- An "optical shutter" that would automatically adapt a window on the molecular level to changes in the weather. One version of this would use a chemical gel applied between sheets of glass that is clear when the air temperature is cool, and turns milky white to reflect sunlight when it is hot.

Ways to reduce heat loss from double - glazed windowpanes that now are standard for new construction in many climates. In tests, Selkowitz said, several prototypes have performed as well as an insulated wall.

To speed the practical application of the research, subcontracts are being farmed out to the commercial sector with an eye to the speed with which such developments can be transferred to the marketplace,

Positive parenting promoted

By ROBERT P. STUDER

Copley News Service
SACRAMENTO — Is giving birth to a child — and raising that little human to a normal and well-adjusted adulthood, ready to take an effective place in society — just an inherent instinct? Or is it a learned behavior?

is it a learned behavior?

"In a society in which each new California marriage is matched by a new California divorce, in which the home is the most frequent site of murder and fully a quarter of those committed in the nation occur within the family," Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, D-San Jose, believes, "leaving it to instinct is not enough.

"In a society in which there were more than half a million reported cases of child abuse in the nation (and an assumption that the reported cases represent only about half of those which actually occur), in a society noteworthy for its soaring sexual abuse, its rising juvenile delinquency, its juvenile crime and violence, its suicides among those in the 15 - to -24 - year - old age bracket," he said, "society itself must get involved."

That, Vasconcellos recalled in an interview, is the reason for his continued emphasis on his "California Task Force on Positive Parenting -Recelebrating Families," a group which he founded in November of 1977 with 12 members and which has grown in the intervening vears to a statewide membership of 2,000. It is supported, he said, by 87 local and statewide groups which represent "a divergence of disciplines and backgrounds."

The task force, he said, conducted four regional meetings a year ago in Oakland, Los Angeles, Fresno and San Diego, and attracted 500 participants. Now, he said, each regional group is seeking to develop its own network of participants.

"Working at a grass roots level, we are developing strategies to inventory community public and private agencies currently working in a supporting role with the families of California," Vasconcellos said.

"We are encouraging society to explore the greatest untapped frontier of today — ourselves and our human potential, to see if we can further understand child growth and development, human development and family relations, and to emphasize the role of positive parenting."

He added, "And whether we believe in parenting by instinct, or as a learned behavior, we must improve our own capacities for becoming more positive in this role.

"Education can be a key. However, the best education is based on trusting in the natural wisdom of the learner, and creating an environment that will enable him or her to free natural capacities for responsibility.

"Parenting can be taught, but we must determine where — beyond the classroom, in adult education, in hospital maternity wards, in teen-age pregnancy programs, in the total community?"

Typical of the kind of results that the task force is seeking is a new policy that will go into effect in the Fresno schools in 1981. Vasconcellos pointed out that it will require parenting education as a condition of graduation from high school.

Such education to strengthen the family also has won support from local government. "We usually are just at the tag end of the problem," commented Sacramento's Mayor Phil Isenberg in an interview.

Archaeologists stay one jump ahead of bulldozers

By ROBERT P. STUDER

Copley News Service SANTA BARBARA — Every once in a while, particularly in historypacked California, the present and the past find themselves locked in battle over a choice bit of land. Usually it follows discovery of a bit of bone, or an Indian artifact, or a bit of carved stone at the site of a new construction project.

Usually it is enough to bring the bulldozers to a halt.

California's Environmental Quality Act specifies that "state agencies must take all action necessary ... to preserve for future generations ... examples of major periods of California history. .

Those words have been enough to bring ambitious projects to a halt. and to redesign others. And at the vanguard of such happenings, charged with protecting the past with the least amount of disruption to the present and the future, are the public archaeologists. They must move quickly to keep one jump ahead of the bulldozers, lest history and heritage be lost forever.

"We sometimes have but 20 or 30 days in which to survey, complete test excavations and prepare a may have been inhabited for 10,000 vears." said field archaeologist Pandora Snethkamp, who heads the Office of Public Archaeology at the University of California here.

"During one particularly busy time," she recalled, "we had 80 students and staff members working in the field or in the laboratory on six different projects. The office is a research arm of the Social Process Research Institute at UC-Santa Barbara, and is closely associated with the anthropology department on the campus.

Snethkamp, who is working toward a doctorate in anthropology.

explained that her group performs a vital function in helping developers to adhere to the law. emphasize preservation of sites 'insitu' - in their original state and position - rather than excavation.

"On a recent project, for example, more than 40 percent of a 69-acre development parcel contained important archaeological sites," she said. "The developer, wishing to minimize disturbance of these sites, asked the public archaeologists to help redesign the plan. As a result, he was able to meet his goals and protect more than 90 percent of the this original plan which would have protected none of them.

Should bulldozers git into a foreign Indian burial ground, Snethkamp pointed out, all work stops at that particular spot until the authorities have been notified and local Indian representatives have been consulted.

We are particularly sensitive to native Americans and we consult with representatives of one or more Indian groups. On any project involving a prehistoric or historic native American site, we include one or more native American

Do bits of bone and stone really merit delaying expensive construction projects?

Snethkamp emphasized that it is only when litigation takes place over disturbance of an historic site that delays really are likely to take

"Our object is to ensure that delays don't occur," she said. "The planning required by the environmental impact study process is done well in advance and the archaeological work usually is completed prior to construction.

Burglarproofing your doorways

Copley News Service

Q. About a year ago, you gave the answer as to how to make a door burglarproof, that is a door that opens to the outside. As you know, when the bolts that hold the hinges together from the outside are removed, the door could be opened from the hinged side, regardless of slide bolts or chains by the handle or doorknob inside. Your answer had something to do with replacing one screw in each hinge with a longer screw that would fit from the door frame into the door itself

Would you please repeat and send me the answer if possible? I have many of your answers hanging in my garage, but this one got away from me. - Albert H., La Mesa, Calif.

A. To protect a door from being lifted from its hinges by pulling the hinge pin, there are three steps to follow: Remove two screws opposite each other from both leaves of the hinge and insert a screw of concrete nail into the jamb leaf protruding one-half inch. Drill out the opposing screw hole in the door. Do this in the top and bottom hinge of the door. When closed, the pins may be removed, but the door will remain firmly in place.

There is a possibility in some doors that the two screws opposite each other provide will be appreciated. from both leafs of the hinge may not exactly match up. In that case, a new hole would need to be drilled to accept the protruding screw or concrete nail.

In most areas, the sheriff or police departments will send an officer to inspect your home and give you suggests for other measures you may take to make your home more secure from intruders.

Q. We have lived in our house for 18 months and a problem has just developed. There is mold growing on my walls, furniture, sills, cupboard doors, woodwork, etc. I have washed everything with Lysol disinfectant and then sprayed with Lysol, but the mold continues to grow. -

Ellen L. C. Perryopolis, Pa. A. Since you cannot eliminate mold spores in the air, you must prevent the conditions necessary for their growth. To do this, the moisture in the air of the house must be reduced. Keep affected areas and items clean. Soil alone can supply sufficient food for Use air conditioners and dehumidifiers to help keep the air dry, and electric fans to ventilate the area. Use silica gel or activated alumina, sold in department or drugstores. They absorb water up to half their weight - making them great for use in small areas such as closets or drawers. Both are safe for fabrics, but follow instructions carefully. Wash or spray persistent problem surfaces weekly with a disinfectant product labeled specifically for mildew control.

Also use paradichlorobenzene (moth crystals) to control mildew growth. Since the chemical can damage some plastics, do not use where plastic surfaces are involved. In the case of garments, remove plastic buttons and ornaments and use wooden or metal hangers.

Q. Is there such a device manufactured and sold to extend a downspout horizontally at ground level? I would like to purchase several that would recoil when empty of rainwater and extend when full. There are those with holes to sprinkle and distribute water. The purpose is to transport rainwater across a sidewalk and when not raining, retract or recoil when empty of rainwater.
